

Laughter Tor

Take the heat of the granite, into the bones that warm weaknss, the lazyness that follows laughter.
Here on the high moor the skylarks speak
in the language of water,
three dimensions of air, fluidity and motion.
The horizon's a jade cup; a singing bowl an ache upon which shadows press in.